

It's not worth it...

Using our mobile phones has become such a big part of our lives, that often we may not even realise we're using them.

But touching a mobile phone while driving is illegal. According to studies, most drivers are aware of the rules, but still use them anyway.

Research suggests that if you text while driving, your risk of a collision during the act increases 23 times - simply by taking your eyes (and your mind) off the road for too long.

In NSW, regardless of what you are using your phone for, you cannot touch a phone under any circumstances unless it is legally mounted - (for fully-licensed drivers)

Learner Drivers (L-Plates) and Provisional Drivers (P-Plates) are completely prohibited from using phones while driving.

The laws are there for a reason - to protect you and others you may be driving. Let's all be a part of making our roads safer. It's just not worth it.
